

Abstract

Litecultura is meant to bring students and literature together using new technological tools. Furthermore, we also use coevaluation and autoevaluation as a way to improve learning. This is a project based on a book chosen by each and every student and, after reading it, they pitch it to their partners, resulting not only in the development of their taste in books but in the improvement of their writing. The chosen book becomes the starting point from which a big net shall spread, allowing the students to connect the different sides of culture.
